comrades took all the heart of the malcontents. [illegible] the generals continued that he would open fire unless they immediately surrendered the remaining mutineers. And down their arms. The officers then resumed command of the regiment. It is expected that the disaffected [illegible] will return to duty.

The loyal troops are now [illegible] confined to the Cossacks. The mutineers have formally presented to General Plavoffski the division commander a series of demands principally relating to the service but including also political [illegible] an appeal to the soldiers of the garrison to join in the fight for improved conditions. Accompanying the demands is an ultimatum that if they are not granted by Tuesday next the mutineers will march out into the streets and parade the city.

The general has promised to present their solutions to his superior officers. The text of the appeal by the mutineers is as follows:

All Russia has risen against the government which has involved the country in a useless war and brought it to the verge of ruin. We soldiers are firmly determined to break down the tyranny of our commanders and to compel reform in the army. Now is the time for us soldiers to awaken comrades we summon you to follow our officers and to assume command until your grievances are redressed. All for one and one for all, hurrah for a free people! Hurrah for the army!

The inclusion in the appeal of the motto of the Socialists "All for one and one for all" shows that it was prepared under the supervision of the Socialistic committee or by the Socialists inside of the barracks. Colonel Semanovski of the Grenadiers overcome by shame sent his sword to the emperor and resigned. It is reported that he committed suicide.

The formal demands of the soldiers include amnesty for all participants in the mutiny, freedom of soldiers meetings, abolition of death penalties, reduction of service to two years, abolition of military courts, increased pay and the return of the army from Manchuria.

There was a serious affair in the Streetenka boulevard in the center of the city last night. A squadron of Cossacks fired on a band of revolutionaries, killing or wounding a dozen persons. The revolutionaries killed two Cossacks.

ST. PETERSBURG, Dec. 17.—It is expected that the government will immediately promulgate a law of association modeled on the French statute as part of its fight against the proletariat organizations. The show of energy by the government certainly has aroused considerable public sympathy especially of the business interests. The bourse today responded to the action of the government, imperial 4s gaining a full point, closing at 79½.

The government is making a special effort to secure the support of the peasants in the coming elections so as to counteract the effect of the revolutionary propaganda among the troops. It is also trying to improve the condition of the railroad men and the post and telegraph employes with a view to the removal of material grievances.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Dec. 17.—A dispatch received here from Batoum reports the outbreak of a revolution there. It says that the streets were barricaded and that fierce fighting took place. The military employed artillery and many persons, including subjects of the Ottoman empire were killed. In response to a request made by the Turkish consul the ports is now arranging for the dispatch of vessels to Batoum to bring back refugees.

The dispatch says that a similar state of affairs prevails in Poti in the same government and in the town of Kutais.

[illegible] the forest. Its innumerable [illegible] penetrating the soil the [illegible] from [illegible] covering the ground [illegible] and capable of absorbing [illegible] moisture like a sponge giving [illegible] gradually to the streams in [illegible] This forest cover also acts [illegible] a blanket to prevent excessive evaporation from the soil. It is the great [illegible] in preventing floods in spring and scarcity of water in summer. The excessive flow in the streams is of great importance to the farmer depending upon irrigation, the manufacturer who uses water power and the [illegible] that must have a sure supply of clear water for domestic use.

In this connection I wish to call your attention to some experiment noted on the Black Hills forest reserve.

Because of necessity of water for irrigation the farmers of the west will always have a great relation to preserve the forest lands. The stockman must have a summer range for his cattle. Lumber and shingles and ties is found on the forest reserve. The permanency of the lumber and tie business depends upon the forest. The mining interests will not allow the forest cover on the mountain slopes to conserve the moisture to flume in the summer months.

Uses of Timber.

The miner must have timber to operate his mine and the cost of this timber will greatly affect his profits. The mines are located in the reserves or near them and have already drawn heavily upon them for timber. This demand is increasing and the reserves will meet it to the full extent if their capacity with out impairing their future productiveness.

The lumberman is called upon to supply a local demand for building and construction material. With the rapid exhaustion of private holdings of timber he also makes demands upon the reserves.

The railroads, telephone and telegraph companies use immense quantities of timber annually and part of their supply comes from the forest reserves. This demand is increasing every year.

The manufacturer and the producers of electricity find the mountain streams the cheapest source of power. And so we might mention a dozen of old industries that depend directly or indirectly on the forest reserves for their maintenance.

In the administration of the reserves it is the purpose of the government to make them just as useful to all the people as is possible. To this end it may announce they are not to be fully developed and utilized the only restrictions being those necessary to protect their continued usefulness and productive power.

When I have said of reserves in general applies to the Pikes Peak forest reserve in particular. It was one of the early ones to be created under the act of 1897 because of its great importance as a watershed. Established by President Harrison in 1892, its boundaries have been subsequently extended and it now covers 142,000 acres.

Pike's Peak Reserve.

The reserve with Pikes Peak as the central figure stands as a sacred for generations to come that this region shall have its natural beauty protected and its sanctified. Thousands of people from all over the land going out from Colorado Springs pass through the reserve on the Short Line and Cog road to Cripple Creek and Pikes Peak. The beauty of this region is world renowned and what we can do to preserve it and improve it by tree planting make it more accessible by building roads and trails, cleaning up the brush and dead timber on the mountain slopes will add just so much to its attractiveness and general usefulness.

Colorado Springs draws its water supply from the Pikes Peak reserve and is therefore much interested in its protection. The city owns nine square miles of water bearing land on the reserve and to this 22 square miles furnish water. The system consists of a chain of eight reservoirs extending from the southwest slope of Pike Peak around to Lake Moraine on the south. Their combined capacity is nearly 2,000,000,000 gallons. Six of these reservoirs are located at high altitudes ranging from above timber line, 12,000 feet down to 10,000 feet and surrounded by city property insuring freedom from contamination they furnish a supply of exceedingly pure water that may well be the envy of any municipality.

In addition to the eight reservoirs for domestic use the city has four reservoirs with a capacity of 145,000,000 gallons that store the water used for irrigation sweeping streets, trees, city parks, etc. The latter are located near Colorado Springs and are supplied from Monument and Fountain creeks, both of which have their sources north of Pikes Peak.

While the condition of these reservoir watersheds can be greatly improved by planting trees they are on the whole in good condition and cover some of the best timber lands on the southern part of the reserve.

Local Conditions.

During the summer of 1904 a forestry party made a study of the forest conditions on the southern part of the Pikes Peak forest reserve. In this park a large amount of [illegible] was collected showing the distribution of the growth and the rate of growth record of trees.

There is abundant evidence that at one time the reserve was well timbered, but about fifty years ago it was visited by destructive fires that burned over all but a few per cent of the forest, causing complete destruction in most parts and greatly modifying the forests in other portions. Of the remaining 75 per cent 6 per cent is above timber line, 7 per cent in barren slopes and open parks, 12 per cent is young growth that has come in since the fire, while the remaining 50 per cent contains very little commercial growth. On the 93 square miles studied there is but 2 per cent of virgin timber and of the remaining land, only 12 per cent of it has been restocked by natural seeding during the fifty years since the fire. One-half of the whole area must be planted to bring it back to its original forested condition. It is true that some parts of this territory are to restocking very slowly and possibly if left alone and fires kept out it would in time be fully restocked [illegible] This however would be a very slow process taking centuries for accomplishment. Therefore it would seem a part of wisdom to assist Nature by planting.

As a result of this study the government has taken up the proposition of reforesting these denuded lands. To accomplish this work will require more than generally [illegible] and it is by no means a easy task. It is now what has been often said that a fire lasting a few hours destroys a growth that has required centuries to produce. With the exception of Short Line railroad and six or seven miles of the cog road extending through the reserve there is considerable danger from fires. During the dry seasons it requires the utmost vigilance on the part of the forest rangers and railroad men to guard against this danger. The large number of campers attracted to this region also use more or less [illegible] this [illegible]. On the fourth of July last the rangers put out eight small fires that had been started by the careless excess of [illegible] the vicinity of Glen.

[illegible] fires have occurred during the past fifty years. There have been several such each doing more or less damage within the past two years.

"Co-operation" started by poor starving English strikers in 1844, to free themselves from the oppression of employers has revolutionized home and business life in Great Britain.

But in "free" America it has so far proved a failure.

Russell's "Soldiers of the Common Good" (in Everybody's for Christmas) tells the dramatic story of a struggle from utter weakness into magnificent power.

Everybody's Magazine 15 cents $1.50 a year

Special representatives wanted for Everybody's Magazine in towns where there are no dealers.

One at Rosemont two summers ago burned over from [illegible] timber on the east side of Big Chief mountain.

Forest Fires

In view of the fact that this danger from fire is a serious one and Colorado Springs has large interest in the reserve not only in the possession of over 7,000 acres of land but [illegible] interest in the protection of the [illegible] mountain slopes there is still [illegible] to be secured by some [illegible] with us in the fire question. Because of the broken topography of the country a fire often may be seen [illegible] a mile away and not be seen. We must have some means of communication by which the forest reserve forces as well as those of the [illegible] water system can be quickly drawn together in case of a serious fire that may threaten the forests lying between Glen and the lower part of Bear Creek [illegible]. A telephone system connecting our stations at Glen and at Jones park with Lake Moraine and the Seven Lakes would be of great mutual value and cost but a little outlay.

The work done by the government the past summer towards a forest station has been the planting of 50,000 trees and the care and extension of [illegible] for nurseries on the reserve. Most all the trees died due to an unusual period of five weeks of dry windy weather following planting. During that time no rain of any consequence fell and the result was disastrous as it would be anywhere under the circumstances. In replanting is a violent operation [illegible] seedling under the best of conditions and with stock only one year old from seed sown in Nebraska where the climatic and soil conditions are so very different from our mountains we did not expect a large percentage to grow. The dry season at the time which may not occur again for years destroyed our hopes and left us with only about 1 per cent of the stand. This one-year old stock from Nebraska was the best we could get and was used for the experiment. Next season we hope to get some 2 year old stock from Nebraska for further experiment. The year following we will have some nursery stock of our own growing to continue the work.

So confident are we of planting successfully that we have constructed three nurseries at three different points on the reserve at considerable [illegible]. We believe that to do successful planting we must grow the seedlings in mountain nurseries where the climate and soil is similar to that in which the tree is to live and develop. During the first two or three years while the young seedling is in the nursery we protect it by shade and provide it with proper moisture. It is then able to maintain itself on the mountain slope and by its succeeding growth will others of its kind bring about the condition we all hope for in forest [illegible] mountains.

Prime Requisites.

The three prime requisites for growing forest nursery stock are a good soil in proper physical condition, partial shade for the tender seedlings and a certain water supply for irrigation. These have been provided at our nurseries and we feel equipped for the work we are called upon to do.

At Glen on the Short Line we have one half acre of seed-beds in which are growing about 75,000 pine, spruce and fir trees. At Rosemont we have one twelfth acre of seed-beds containing about 40,000 seedlings making 45,000 now growing. At Jones Park on Bear creek everything is in readiness to planting out acre of seed beds next spring. This will increase our seedling crop by 50,000 making in all 87,500 trees to be growing next season in our nurseries.

The conditions on the Pikes Peak reserve are representative of the whole Rocky mountain region and this the first experiment in tree-planting in the Rockies is being watched with much interest by the government as well as by others because of its bearing on the solution of the problem of reforestation.

We invite the college to make full use of our nurseries, all our operations and experience as object lessons for the students of the proposed forest school. It is possible that we may cooperate with the college in giving the students some practical experience in tree-planting, constructing fire lines and nursery work such as is being done in other places.

I assure you it will be a great pleasure to co-operate with the city and the college in extending the interest in forestry, already so well started, and in bringing about the conditions on Pikes Peak reserve that we all hope to accomplish.

COMMISSIONER GARFIELD HAS RECOMMENDATIONS FOR CORRECTING EVILS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—James Rudolph Garfield, commissioner of corporations, in his annual report, makes the following comment and recommendations concerning the existing industrial

... work upon the investigation of the tries and particular corporations has strengthened my conviction that the remedy for existing evils can be expected until Congress more fully its power of regulation under the commerce clause of the constitution. No fact of industrial life is more obvious than that modern business has outgrown and wholly disregards state lines, and that the jurisdictions of the single states as applied to the operations of a great interstate business are futile and even harmful. A close study of the methods of organization and operation of the greater industrial corporations, their relation to transportation companies both rail and water, their methods of competition, the extension of their business throughout many states, and the sale of their commodities throughout the world proves that they have actually gone beyond the possibility of proper supervision or control by the single state which gave them corporate existence. Their relation to the transportation companies alone is a sufficient reason for bringing them under federal regulation.

It is idle to claim the railroads are wholly at fault for rebates, discriminations and other devices for affording to one shipper improper advantages over a competitor. It is impossible to prevent such abuses by purely penal legislation. This does not mean that the enforcement of the anti-trust law has not been beneficial for it has. Its enforcement has compelled some respect for the law, which until recently, was wholly lacking. But so far as affecting a permanent change of the conditions which that law denounces, but little has been done. The imposition of a penalty upon a combination simply drives the men in that combination to the formation of another device for accomplishing the same purpose, and this for the reason that combination is an industrial necessity, and hence will be engaged in despite penal legislation.

By the exercise of the affirmative power granted under the commerce clause congress can with safety provide a method by which reasonable combination may be permitted. This method must be founded upon an act of the federal government which will give to corporations engaged in interstate and foreign commerce standing and recognition under a federal act. It may be accomplished either by a license, to engage in such commerce or by a charter granted by the federal government. Under either form, corporations should provide all requisite safeguards necessary to insure publicity and honesty in promotion, organization, capitalization, and conduct of the corporation, it being to the good interest, not only of the stockholders of the corporation, but of the public at large. Most important of all, to stop the spectacle of a corporation, if it does not obey a visitor of the federal statutes, at all times preserving to the corporation and its stockholders the right of judicial appeal against the improper exercise of executive authority.

The power of congress to regulate interstate commerce being plenary, that body may determine to what extent it will first exercise its power. The transportation companies will clearly should come within the terms of such a measure; and with them should be joined the greater corporations engaged in the production, manufacture, and distribution of those staples which affect the lives of the people of this country, and the monopolization of which will necessarily result in hardship and injustice to the individual. Such a law is not an invasion of individual liberty or right, is not an effort to have the government do that which the individual could best do, and would not in its effect, destroy individual enterprise nor the possibility of individual success. It would afford equality of opportunity, not equality in results.

It is universally recognized that the great highways of commerce should be open to all upon equal terms. It is likewise true that the opportunities for the individual to engage in industrial enterprise should be equally free. The individual is not strong enough ordinarily to protect himself against a great corporation. He can be secure in his rights only under a law which subjects the corporation to regulation by a government whose jurisdiction is broad enough and whose

OPEN PUBLICITY THE BEST GUARANTY OF MERIT.

When a master of a medicine said that grandfathers for family use, taken from a fearless publishing house, that its ingredients on plain English ... on his part is the best possible evidence that he is not afraid to have the searchlight of investigation turned full upon his formula, and that he fears the publicity and the most thorough investigation. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for the cure of the weaknesses, periodical pains and functional derangements of the organs of ... is now put up for sale through druggists for women, because the maker of which is not afraid to take his patients into his full confidence by such open and honest publicity.

A glance at the published ingredients on each bottle wrapper will show that it is made wholly from native American medicinal roots, that it contains no poisonous or habit forming drugs, no barbitates and no alcohol, pure triple refined glycerine of proper strength being used instead of the commonly employed alcohol, both for extracting and preserving the active medicinal properties found in the roots of the American forest plants employed. It is the only medicine for women's peculiar diseases sold by druggists that does not contain a large percentage of alcohol, which is in the long run so harmful to woman's delicate nervous system. Now glycerine is perfectly harmless and serves a valuable purpose by possessing intrinsic value all its own, and besides it enhances the curative effect of the other ingredients entering into the Favorite Prescription.

Some of the ablest medical writers and teachers endorse these views and praise all the several ingredients of which Favorite Prescription is composed—recommending them for the cure of the very same diseases for which this world famed medicine is advised. No other medicine for women has any such professional endorsement—worth more than any number of ordinary testimonials. If interested, send name and address to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., for his little book of extracts from the works of eminent medical writers and teachers, endorsing the several ingredients and telling just what Dr. Pierce's medicines are made of. It's free for the asking.

ANARCHY IN RUSSIA.

ANARCHY, stark, rampant anarchy, is the ruling power in Russia today. However hard the official government may try to disguise real conditions, the fact is evident that it is as powerless to enforce its grandiloquent manifestoes as it was a year ago to turn the tide of Japanese victory. Count Witte is struggling desperately to preserve some semblance of order, but every day he loses ground, and the chances that he will soon sink into the maelstrom are constantly multiplying. A comparison of the dispatches from week to week shows that the situation is gradually growing worse, for evils which a month ago appeared to be curable are now given up as hopeless. The so-called "invisible government," composed of the various proletariat organizations, exercises far more authority than the government of which the Czar is the nominal head, but so many factions are struggling for leadership that virtual chaos exists.

In Reval the city council has passed a resolution favoring the removal of the troops and the police from the city, and reliance for protection on the workmen's militia. It was also resolved to transform the city treasury into a strike fund. At St. Petersburg, Moscow, Warsaw and other large centers of population the troops are in varying stages of rebellion, and at all of the naval ports the crews of the warships are liable at any time to again enact the Kniaz Potemkin drama. Throughout the empire the telegraphers' strike continues, and there is scarcely a city in which labor disturbances of a political nature are in progress. Riots and massacres are of daily occurrence; the Jewish population live in constant fear of their lives; newspapers which six months ago would not have dared voice their opinions now publish the most seditious utterances, and the government may threaten and even suppress them, but it can not kill their circulation. A hundred newspaper offices may be closed, but the papers find their way into the hands of the people just the same.

In his reply to the Moscow Zemstvo Congress, Count Witte says that inasmuch as the foremost duty of that body is to carry out the terms of the Czar's manifesto of October 30, no consideration will be given to petitions going beyond the limits of the manifesto. Neither can measures be taken which might affect the rights of the assembly before it meets. However, the adoption of temporary measures to assure these liberties is not prohibited. The most significant part of the reply is that "the continued troubles, revolts and open acts of the revolutionists against the authority of the state and the integrity of the empire do not permit the government to dispense with the enforcement of the exceptional measures taken in certain localities."

The manifesto of October 30 promised the people the most radical reforms known in Russia since the emancipation of the serfs. There is reason to believe that the government made these promises in good faith, for they were made at the instigation of Count Witte, who is known to be honestly striving for better government. The people should have accepted the manifesto in the spirit in which it was given, and waited until a fair trial of its provisions could be had before resorting to further demonstration. Instead they have only returned to the attack with redoubled fury, thereby making it impossible for Count Witte to inaugurate the new regime. In their blind rage they are defeating the very objects they seek to gain. The manifesto of October 30 is liberal and apparently practicable, and its adoption would surely pave the way to even greater reforms, but so long as prevailing conditions continue, reasonable reform is out of the question. The proletariat are merely intensifying chaos.

FEDERAL INSURANCE CONTROL.

THE House of Representatives has been indulging in a four-days discussion of Federal control of insurance, and prospects are that it will continue to talk on this subject for a good part of the time between now and the holiday adjournment next Thursday. Bourke Cockran has proposed that Congress, through its taxing powers, confine each insurance company to the state in which it is organized. Mr. Mann, of Illinois, outlined a proposed means of control which he expects to present in the form of a bill, leaving it to the insurance companies to submit voluntarily to Federal examinations. It is clear that the House is still floundering so far as this subject is concerned.

In his recent message President Roosevelt recognized the doubt which exists as to the authority of Congress to legislate for Federal control of insurance. He quotes from his annual message of last year the recommendation "that the Congress carefully consider whether the power of the Bureau of Corporations can not constitutionally be extended to cover interstate transactions in insurance." Again he says: "Recent events have emphasized the importance of an early and exhaustive consideration of this question, to see whether it is not possible to furnish better safeguards than the several states have been able to furnish against corruption of the flagrant kind which has been exposed. The President recommends that "as the business has outgrown in magnitude the possibility of adequate state supervision, the Congress should carefully consider whether some legislation [illegible] in [illegible] the bureau was authorized to publish useful information concerning interstate corporations, "including corporations engaged in insurance." But if the bureau can do nothing further than to collect and publish statistics, it is, in the President's words, "wholly ineffective to regulate this form of commercial intercourse." Commissioner Garfield's annual report, made public today, contains an exposition of his views on the subject, as follows:

> The compilation of state insurance laws has been finished, and some special phases of the question of Federal supervision have been examined, but in view of the decisions of the Supreme Court I have not felt warranted in trying to assume jurisdiction over insurance companies for the purpose of investigation. The fact that state supervision has failed to prevent great abuses in the management of some companies does not of itself justify Federal action. It must be shown, first, that insurance is subject to Federal regulation under the commerce clause of the Constitution; second, that Federal supervision would be of such a character as to correct existing abuses and prevent future ones, and, third, that such supervision would result not only in greater security to policy holders, but would relieve them, through their companies, of the great and unnecessary expense of duplicated inspections and investigations by different states. Seemingly the most effective way to settle the question is for Congress to so legislate upon the subject as to afford an opportunity to present to the Supreme Court the question whether insurance as now conducted is interstate commerce, and hence subject to Federal regulation.

Mr. Garfield's opinion that the failure of state supervision does not warrant Federal supervision seems to be in conflict with the President's views, though the President does not specifically indorse Federal regulation. It is to be inferred from the tenor of his expressions on the subject that he would indorse such a course if he were sure it would be constitutional. It is interesting, too, to note that Mr. Roosevelt refers to insurance as a "form of commercial intercourse" between the states, the inference being that he regards it as interstate commerce. This is the crux of the whole question. If insurance is interstate commerce the Bureau of Corporations may be intrusted with the duty of supervising its workings, but if it is not interstate commerce Federal supervision can come about only through a constitutional amendment—a very difficult thing to secure.

HAZING AND THE OFFICERS.

THERE may be a very substantial basis of truth in the resolution introduced in the House last Saturday by Representative Spear, of Maryland, criticising the officers of the Naval Academy for tacitly encouraging the practices which brought about the Meriwether-Branch tragedy. The resolution charges that the testimony given before the recent court martial shows that the practices of fagging, hazing and fighting are common at the Academy, and that "the same was winked at, and connived at by the officers of said institution." It is urged that a thorough investigation by the House Committee on Naval Affairs be held, and the responsibility for recent occurrences at Annapolis be fixed, "so that hereafter the result may not end with the mere dismissing of promising young men from the institution, but bring to book and visit proper penalties upon the trained officers in charge of such institutions for the conduct of which they must be held responsible."

It has often been charged, though with how much truth we are unable to say, that the officers at Annapolis and West Point do "wink at" the practices referred to by Mr. Spear in his somewhat verbose resolution. If this is the case, the explanation is probably to be found in the fact that these officers were once midshipmen and cadets themselves. All of them have been hazed, perhaps all of them were compelled to fag for their elders, and the chances are that most of them indulged in an occasional fist fight. It may be a survival of the primitive man in us, but the fact remains that most people who have been put through a severe "initiation," or other like process of leveling down, take an unfeigned delight in seeing the next fellow get the same kind of medicine. Perhaps this is why the officers at the Government academies tolerate hazing—assuming that they do tolerate it. They can not openly encourage the practice, but they can at least take a secret satisfaction in knowing that the youngsters of today are being bereft of their unseemly pride just as they themselves were in years gone by.

This attitude would be beyond criticism if the hazing consisted in harmless and good-natured practices, but when it degenerates into fiendish torture, often malicious, it can not be condoned. The whole country is shocked and disgusted by the recent events at Annapolis, and if the officers are in any way responsible for them they certainly should be "brought to book," as Mr. Spear expresses it.

Edison predicts that electric automobiles will drive the horse out of business. That prediction has been made ever since the advent of the bicycle, but according to Secretary Wilson's recent report there are more horses, and of higher aggregate value, in this country now than ever before.

MUNICIPAL CAUTION ADVISED.

The Municipal Journal is impressed with the need of warning American cities of the danger that comes from carrying municipal ownership too far. Though the line of safety is not laid down by the Journal, it refers to the experience of British cities whose debts have mounted up to a tremendous figure and have become so enormous as even to have excited the comment of Mr. Austen Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, in his last annual budget to the house of commons.

It is stated officially that the debts of British cities for municipal properties now amount to more than $2,000,000,000 and that taxation on account of such investments is rising to a height unknown before. The Municipal Journal warns Americans that their cities are accorded a great deal more freedom than is the rule abroad, so that they are not under limitation of debt save an occasional 10 per cent limit, but are at liberty to go practically as far as they please in utility investment. The difficulty, as the Journal points out, in discussing municipal ownership is in getting down to facts, looking at the problem in each city by itself, of studying the situation and the methods of financing such projects.

Citizens will agree that this discussion is admirable in its way because it indicates the tendency of Americans to turn their attention to the serious study of this great question before embarking in it. Wider comparison with foreign cities which show their profit in municipal ownership are wholly misleading for American cities, as Mr. Dalrymple points out, are different from them partly because our civil service system is still so crude and partly because the rate of wages in American cities is two or three times that of the pay for equivalent service in foreign cities.—Buffalo News.

Press Opinions

TROUBLES OF HIS OWN.

Just because he carries a big stick occasionally, all the little nations needn't think Uncle Sam is general international policeman and rush to tell him their troubles. Uncle Sam has troubles of his own just now. Congress is meeting.—Pittsburg Gazette.

AN INSINUATION.

Representative Sheppard, of Texas, has introduced a bill providing that congressmen who use railroad passes shall not hereafter be permitted to collect mileage from the government. Does the gentleman intend to insinuate that any of our statesmen have been guilty of such dishonesty in the past.—Chicago Record-Herald.

TOOK A LOOK, PERHAPS.

Colonel Pettitt, of the United States Army, says true patriotism is scarce in this country. Colonel Pettitt has probably been looking over the census figures and found that the average population of the country is only fifteen to the square mile.—Kansas City Journal.

A STANDPAT CONGRESS.

There are said to be 90 Republicans in the national house who favor a reduction of the tariff through reciprocal concessions. This, however, is far from constituting a majority of the party in the chamber. Much the larger number seem to agree with Mr. Dalzell, of Pittsburg, that anybody who favors tariff revision at this time count to get out of the party. It is evidently to be a standpat Congress.—Springfield Republican.

Near to Nature

PLUCKED FROM NEIGHBOR'S GARDEN.

Mrs. M. Henkel brought a strawberry blossom and a fully developed berry into our office Saturday which she had plucked in her neighbor's garden. The idea of having strawberries in blossom at this time of the year is indeed a surprise to us, but it shows that this wonderful country of ours is capable of doing the unexpected.—Cascyville (Wis.) Record.

MUNICIPAL IMPROVEMENT.

The additional valuation to the town of Keystone in the construction of the lattice fence build by Messrs. Matney & Thomas, as contractors, which reaches from one end of the town to the other one side of the stone wall adjacent to the town proper is perhaps beyond compare. It is very attractive. The signs placed thereon representing the business people is another feature worthy of note.—Keystone (W. Va.) Times.

J. REDIG, "GENIOUS."

It is worth while to see the curiosities which Jacob Redig has on his lots. It is a wind mill which revolves a pair dancing, a fireman on top of the mill and another fireman on the top of a ladder placed against the cupola of his coal house, waving his arms as though giving orders. His shoemaker sign is also a novelty and shows that the old gentleman is a genious. The carving of all these things having been done by hand and the gentleman takes great pride in them.—Dyersville (Ia.) Commercial.

APPERTAININ' TO OSKALOOSA.

Mrs. Meeks has arranged with her friends, old and young, to surprise her husband, J. L. Meeks, the famous sorghum manufacturer northeast of town, on Saturday evening.

A team belonging to Ed Briggs ran away with Harry Harding and John Allison one day last week and shook things around pretty lively, but did no damage except cracking a rib or two for John, which goes rather hard with a man of his age.

John Randall had a lively runaway last week, which smashed his buggy up in good shape.

Mr. Ramsey put a new roof on the kitchen that he built for his man that takes care of the mules at the mine.

Robert Thomas and wife have returned from their visiting in Ohio and report a fine time. They visited thirty homes, attended one funeral, one wedding, and were at church twice.—Oskaloosa (Ia.) Globe.

BAGLEY GETS ON THE MAP

Did Cassville ever stop to think how many of her people find employment in Bagley? Her peddagogues have successfully wielded the seasoned birch, were society favorites and helpers both in lesses and church. The Record furnishes news matter racy, good and true, and the Index in job work has quite a little to do. Frank Turtscher gives our hair a scientific clip, while Charles Feat gives the thirsty public a cooling sip. Dentist Curry is as good as any in the north or south, and the first thing he says, "Please open your mouth." Martha Weber, now helper in the hotel, hope she's come to stay—and not go and get married like good little Hee. Weatherwax was station agent and always kept a blooded pup, and we would have him yet if Cassville hadn't gobbled him up. Now this is enough and sufficient to prove to you our interests are identical—should to each other be ever true.—Cassville (Wis.) Record.

TIDINGS FROM BIG SCUFFLE.

Job Frazier is having a new roof put on his cellar. W. N. Haskell and Judge Thomas delivered separate state speeches at the Big Scuffle school house last night. They had their statehood with them.

The Ladies' Aid society had a cake auction and realized $10, to be used in replacing the fence at the school house, which was whittled down by the Sunday school boys. All their cake is now dough.

Will Jones has picked his pumpkins and his cows are happy.

Grandma Hopkins fell in the well at her house last week and was rescued by the skin of her teeth. Her sorrowful says the water in that well was not deep enough.

Sam Lemmons got on a tear last Sunday and took his best girl to church with him. He was so happy that everybody thought he had got religion.—Big Scuffle Correspondence (I. T.) Democrat.

ITALY'S WORLD'S FAIR.

To Vaunt National Achievements at Milan---Benefits of Italian Immigration.

We might borrow a title from Kipling and call the forthcoming international exhibition of Milan a show of "Traffics and Discoveries." It is meant to celebrate the opening of the Simplon tunnel to the practical activities of international traffic. And as such, it had been planned merely for a review and demonstration of transports by land and water, and other means of intercommunication, telegraphs, telephones, airships and Wireless. It started as a limited national celebration; it is slowly but surely expanding into a solemnity of world-wide importance and interest. For these days of mechanical achievement, no show could have been calculated to draw more attention and command more respect than a show of the world's work in that line. As soon as the official invitations were out France and Germany, Switzerland and Belgium, the nations most directly concerned in the opening of the Simplon pass, hastened to signify their approval and hearty good will, and started preparations for official intervention. England, Austria, Hungary, Japan and Mexico soon were added to the list, and this list, which is highly complimentary to Italy, stands now complete, and includes Holland, Norway, Spain, Russia, Greece, Portugal, Sweden, Turkey and Roumania. In short, anybody who has anything to show, among the family of European powers, is going to show it at Milan. From beyond the European boundaries the United States, the Argentine Republic, Peru, Brazil, San Domingo, India, China, Persia, and Tunisia are coming forward, too. The beautiful public grounds near the triumphal arch erected by Napoleon at the beginning of the northern carriage road from Milan, the Arch and Road of the Simplon—are entirely given up to the future exposition, with eighty special buildings, galleries, pavilions, etc., fitted with all conveniences, including a powerful wireless plant. Prizes to the amount of $30,000 have been offered for aerial navigation and all other aeronautical achievements, while $40,000 is set apart for prize winners on the race course.

One hundred congresses and conventions, national and international, will meet in Milan from April to November. Dog, horse shows, athletic tournaments, automobilist meets and races, international competitions for target shooting, fencing and all other sports are announced, not to mention the lighter amusements, curiosities and devices of every kind bountifully provided for the non-scientific delectation of visitors, whose number, it is approximately calculated, will exceed five million, undoubtedly.

Work of Italians Abroad.

No other department of the exhibition is, is strikingly interesting to Italians and foreigners as one which, though not particularly featured in the programs of the show, yet is novel and absolutely original, such as few, if any, nations besides Italy might attempt to offer. It goes under the heading "Italiani all Estero"—Italians abroad, and is divided in fourteen sections, for which material is being actually collected by a specially appointed committee of prominent Milanese citizens, by the departments of state and institutions depending therefrom, and by private volunteers, too.

The first five sections will cover "The Work of Italians Abroad," in science, literature, art, charities, public life, exploration, agriculture, colonizing and mining industry and trade, public works, transports and communications by land, sea, air, etc. And, in fact, we are apt not to always realize how much of Italy's energy is thus scattered all over the world; how many Italians have abroad occupied public positions, held official commissions, written memorable works, started worthy charities, taught in foreign institutions of learning, founded or directed scientific observatories, laboratories, hospitals, how many Italian artists, writers, journalists have worked and are working in foreign countries. The work of exploration and survey, geographic, oceanographic, ethnographic, archaeologic, both of an official and a private character, that Italians have given to the world during the last ten years for example, is truly conspicuous, and deserves to be brought into public notice. So does the tremendous amount of activity which we too easily take for granted or ignore altogether, in the line of agriculture, fisheries, mining and colonizing enterprises, owned, manned or directed by Italians. Information, descriptive and graphic, photographs and plans, designs and surveys, will finally reveal to Italy this part of herself of which she really ignores the extension and power.

Consular and diplomatic agents, chambers of commerce, commercial information bureaus, Italian banks and exchanges, industrial and commercial associations for production, importation and exportation and so forth will be called upon to furnish information about themselves and kindred institutions abroad. The fifth section will furnish us with a clear idea of how much the world owes to Italy in civil engineering, railroad building, hydraulic plans, how many sail and steamships, merchantmen and fishermen, hoist the flag of Italy in foreign ports and seas, and so forth. To this section will also belong the latest achievements of Italian inventors, directed to overcome obstacles of distance, depth of water, etc.

The name of Marconi leads by far; but Pino, with his hydroscope and number of minor workers in telephony, telegraphy, deep sea exploration with industrial purposes, ship saving, teleautography, cable laying and the hundred other things which the outsider is ready enough to get the advantage, but of which he never thinks, will receive that appreciation which only comes from direct acquaintance with systems and possibilities of work.

Italian Emigration.

With the main subject of emigration, that conspicuous phenomenon of Italian life, besides the official exhibits regarding benevolent and protective institutions, their publications, the work of the Italian board of emigration, of the aid society for Italian workmen in the east, of the information labor bureaus, of the steamship companies and their emigrant carrying vessels, of the foreign countries interested in Italian immigration, with statistics, photographs, documents, publications on the subject, there are connected several side-shows especially designed to throw light on interesting aspects of the Italian emigration. We shall, therefore, have an exhibit of the Italian press abroad. It undoubtedly has its interest and its value, and may have a serious lesson to teach us as regards the moral and intellectual standard of the Italian colony abroad. A number of monographs will be open to consultation, illustrating the Italian colonies and settlements abroad, their life, their trades, the exchange, importation and exportation, with the mother country, etc. Italian association in foreign lands, of military, confessional, benevolent, athletic or musical character, recreation clubs and kindred institutions will also be given due consideration, as well as the work of Italian schools, educational associations, circulating libraries, etc. Missions, Catholic and other, from all over the world, provided they are interested in and work among Italians, are entitled to a section of their own.—Boston Transcript.

COLLEGE TO OPEN SCHOOL OF FORESTRY NEXT FALL

In speaking of the Colorado college school of forestry before the Polytechnic society, President Slocum said that it was the hope of those interested to have the school opened next fall if Dr. Pinchot can find the right man to place at the head of the institution by that time.

Dr. Pinchot and all of the Washington authorities are enthusiastic over the school plan. The secretary of agriculture expressed a desire to do all in his power to aid the college in the establishment of the school as soon as possible in the development of the work, and Colorado and the west have every reason to expect splendid results from the Colorado college school of forestry in nature, preparing those who wanted to become professionals in forestry service for a post graduate course at the school at Yale. Later, as the school develops, all work can be taken here. Many students who have no intention of becoming professional foresters will be seen at work in the school of forestry as an important part of their general education.

The facilities now possessed by the college for the establishment of the school are comparatively simple.

RECENT ADDITIONS TO THE PUBLIC LIBRARY SHELVES

A feature of the list of new books received at the Colorado Springs public library during the last week is the number of Christmas books and Santa Claus stories. An interesting series telling of the celebration of Christmas in different countries has also been received. Two recent pamphlets of great political interest at this time were registered during the week. One is "The facts About Railroad Rates," by H. T. Newcomb, and the other "Great Canals of the World," by D. P. Austin. The list of new books is as follows:

New Books.

"Labor Problems," by Thos. S. Adams; "Poor and the Land," by H. R. Haggard; "Pure Sociology," by L. F. Ward; "Women of Turkey and Their Folk-Lore," by Lucy M. J. SHOW BEGINS THIS MORNING

DOG AND POULTRY SHOW HAS MANY ENTRIES AND MANY TROPHIES ARE OFFERED.

With every indication of success, financially, in the quality of exhibits and in attendance, the first annual bench show of the Colorado Springs Kennel club and the ninth annual exhibition of the Pike's Peak Poultry association will begin in Temple theater at 10 o'clock this morning. The show will close Thursday night.

Everything is in readiness for the big show. A small army of men were at work all day Saturday and part of yesterday preparing for the exhibition. The benches and coops are all in place and the out-of-town entries were given position yesterday. Local dogs, chickens and pigeons will be assigned to places this morning.

More than 1,000 fowls and 225 dogs will be on exhibition. James Cole, of Kansas City, will judge the dogs; D. T. Heimlich, of Jacksonville, Ill., will judge the chickens, ducks and geese, and Dr. F. H. Martin will place awards on the winning pigeons.

The list of cups and special prizes is large, business men having been generous in offering awards. The challenge cup for dogs has been offered by the Kennel club, while The Gazette will give a handsome challenge cup for the largest and best poultry exhibition.

Home trading is essential to the prosperity of Colorado Springs. Let us prosper.

HYDRO-ELECTRIC REPORT IS STILL IN ABEYANCE

ALDERMAN ALBIN TO ASK CITY COUNCIL TONIGHT FOR FURTHER TIME—ROUTINE BUSINESS.

The regular session of the city council this evening will be devoted largely to routine matters.

Owing to the great amount of time devoted to the appropriation ordinance since the last regular meeting, there has been no time in which to investigate the numerous matters referred to special committees. Alderman Verner as chairman of the special committee, to which was referred the communication from Superintendent Vining of the Colorado Midland railway, will ask further time, and Alderman Albin, chairman of the special committee to investigate the operations of the Hydro-Electric company, will also request further time.

A resolution will be introduced by Alderman Albin calling upon the president of the council to revoke the power franchise held by the Short Line.

When the council adjourns it will be to meet again on Tuesday, December 26, at which date the appropriation ordinance will be passed.

PRINCIPAL NOW BETWEEN SCYLLA AND CHARYBDIS

MUST MAKE GOOD THREAT TO DESTROY "FRATS"—TELLS GAZETTE IT'S NONE OF HIS BUSINESS.

The fraternity question as the Colorado Springs High school is still unsettled. The 10 days' time which Principal J. B. Richards gave the "frat" men to resign has expired and the local chapters still flourish, although Mr. Richards now knows the name of every fraternity man in the school. Recently he said, "I will follow the fraternity trail until there is nothing left of it." It is now up to him to make good his threat.

It is reported, on good authority that Mr. Richards called the fraternity presidents into his office last Friday and requested them to give him a list of the members of their chapters. The presidents promptly furnished the desired information.

When Mr. Richards was asked by a representative of The Gazette last night what he expects to do, he replied: "It is none of your business. I guess I can take care of this matter all right without your newspaper's help."

The members of the "frats" are defiant, and it will be interesting to see how the belligerent principal "follows the trail."

ELK IN SPRINGS ON WAY TO FARM

A carload of live elk—not the the B. P. O. E. variety, but the kind that wear real horns—passed through Colorado Springs yesterday over the Colorado Midland. They were shipped from Wyoming to W. H. Pigg, of Freshwater, Colo., who has started an elk farm—the only one in existence. Several members of Colorado Springs lodge No. 309, viewed the "real ones" at the Santa Fe depot.

DETECTIVES WATCH FOR SHOPLIFTERS

In an effort to put a stop to the operations of kleptomaniacs, shoplifters and petty thieves, several of the larger stores of the city have added to their list of employes a house detective. The officer is required to mingle with the crowd of shoppers and protect the customers from pickpockets as well as be on the lookout for those who may be tempted to appropriate goods for which they have not paid. The merchants are also receiving the support of the police department, and during the holiday rush several additional plain-clothes officers will be on duty. Three arrests were made Saturday night, two of the offenders being juveniles were turned over to Officer W. M. Brassoner of the juvenile court and the other offender may be taken before a justice of the peace for hearing.

CITY FIRE WARDEN ILL AT HOSPITAL

John Courter, city fire warden, is in St. Francis hospital suffering from a paralytic stroke. He is in a critical condition owing to his advanced age. He was 78 years of age last May. Mr. Courter has quarters at the central fire station. For several days he complained of being indisposed. Dr. F. O. Hanford was called and, after an examination, ordered the aged man removed to the hospital.

MUCH WANTED BUNCO ARTIST IS IDENTIFIED

NEBRASKA SHERIFF RECOGNIZES PRISONER IN COUNTY JAIL—TO GET REQUISITION PAPERS.

Sheriff Nicholas Rees of Lincoln, Neb., arrived in the city yesterday morning for the purpose of interviewing J. P. Kearns, alias Charlie O'Connor, alias Henry Cunningham, who is in the county jail awaiting trial in the district court upon a charge of working a bunco game upon R. F. Sims.

The visiting sheriff was accompanied to the county jail by Police Chief Alex Adams. When Sheriff Rees caught sight of Kearns he recognized him at once as Charlie O'Connor, a bunco artist who broke out of the Lincoln jail, with five other prisoners, on September 5, 1905, and for whose capture a reward of $25 had been offered. During the interview that followed, the prisoner admitted his identity and appeared as anxious to remain in this state as Sheriff Rees was to take him back to Nebraska.

Sheriff Rees said that O'Connor was the only one of the six men who escaped from his jail that he had been able to secure any trace of. "When you are through with O'Connor here," said Rees, "let me know and I will come after him with the necessary requisition papers."

MANY GUESTS AT JEWISH WEDDING

GREENBURG-COHEN NUPTIALS OCCASION FOR FEAST OF GOOD THINGS AND CONGRATULATIONS.

There never was quite such another wedding in Colorado Springs as that which took place at 124 South Conejos street last night.

The groom was Israel Greenberg, who keeps a store on West Huerfano, and the bride was Mrs. Mary Cohen, who is 25 years old. She is very pretty and came here one year and a half ago from Roumania. Her former husband is divorced and she has a little daughter.

The bride's mother recently came from Roumania, but, since the service was in Hebrew and the talk all in German, she lost nothing by not speaking English. As for the goose and all the other good things to eat and to drink, and as for the music, too, these were of a quality to be appreciated in any language, or in no language at all, just as one might choose to take them.

The wedding was celebrated at the bride's home where they are now "at home" to friends. There were 100 guests besides children of guests present, and the wedding supper was served at three tables three times, and was really never over until the musicians placed their violins in cases and the dancers rested for the night.

For the first time since his own son married and for the second time in his long residence in Colorado Springs, Rabbi Hayutin was called on to perform a Jewish marriage service in strictly the old Hebraic fashion. The bride and the groom stood under a canopy of snowy satin in the center of which was a huge star of David and the Hebrew word "Zion."

The wedding was in Hebrew and then when the bride and groom and many guests were seated at the tables upstairs Rabbi Hayutin made them a great speech in German, telling them all how to be happy, as if they were not full of happiness. It was a fine speech and everybody said "hear, hear," in German and in Hebrew. After they drank the health of the bride and the groom and of the bride's little girl and the bride's mother, they drank the health of Rabbi Hayutin, the priest who is old in years and young in heart, until he was almost embarrassed. It was all so splendid that an extremely young man told a Gazette reporter, who was murdering German in seven different accents, that Rabbi Hayutin was to be called on to perform just such another ceremony almost immediately, and a pretty little Jewess across the table who overheard, blushed with a fury amounting to suspicion.

Decision of judges and awarding of prizes.

The Colorado college calendar for 1906 has just been published by Donald DeWitt and is being eagerly sought after by the college students. It contains seven large pages, 18 new halftones of the college, a new Tiger head and college seal. By simplicity of arrangement as well as by outlining the pictures with a border of gold, a highly artistic effect has been attained. Whitney & Grimwood are handling this year's calendar.

Several hundred thousand dollars are sent out of Colorado Springs every year for family supplies. Don't you think it's time to "get busy" and keep this money at home?

TRIED TO BURGLARIZE A CHINAMAN'S STORE

An unsuccessful attempt was made to burglarize the Chinese store of Yee Wing, 24 East Kiowa street, early Saturday morning. A window was broken but steel bars prevented operations in that direction and the thieves next went to work on the rear door. Before this could be forced they would-be burglars were frightened away by the approach of a patrolman.
